The Daily Quote

"Rep. Charlie Dent, R-Pa., another senior House appropriator, said Congress may be heading for a long-term punt on spending decisions that would keep the government operating on autopilot for the entire fiscal year, which ends next September. While a fresh spending package could still be cobbled together when the stopgap runs out next spring, Dent said he was doubtful. 'If we can't pass the appropriations bills now, we sure as hell won't be able to do it in March, April or May...'"
